

Jen Faith Brown- received her Master's Degree in Acting from the professional actor training program at The Alabama Shakespeare Festival and her BFA in Musical Theatre from Syracuse University. Jen is the founder and artistic director of Light keeper productions, a 501 C-3 organization that produces theatre, film, and creative arts therapy projects throughout the year. Due to her outreach work with Lightkeeper, Jen pursued training in Drama Therapy and received her RDT (Registered Drama Therapist) certification through the NADTA (North American Drama Therapy Association) Jen's certification has enabled her to bring various arts and music programs to underserved populations including Seniors, Veterans, Holocaust Survivors and children with special needs. Jen continues to work as an actor/singer both in NY and Los Angeles. Favorite projects include the animated film Sing! and "Only a Girl "a play she co-wrote based on personal interviews she had with Holocaust rescuer Irene Gut Opdyke. The piece is recognized as an alternative teaching tool for the Holocaust education mandate. Jen is proud to continue to present "Only a Girl" at theaters, schools, and conferences throughout the East and West Coast. The film version of "Only a Girl" is currently in development. Jen is a proud member of Actors Equity, SAG/AFTRA and the NADTA.
